

Wheel of Life Assessment

FREE RESOURCE · COACHING

Wheel of Life Assessment

The classic coaching Wheel of Life tool with 8 life dimensions, a scoring and reflection guide, and prompts for identifying coaching focus areas.

Wheel of Life Template

8 Life Dimensions

Scoring & Reflection

Focus Identification

8

life dimensions

1–10

rating scale

3

reflection prompts

4

focus prompts

HOW TO USE THIS WHEEL

For each of the 8 dimensions, rate your current satisfaction from 1 (centre, lowest) to 10 (outer edge, highest), then shade or mark that segment from the centre outward. Once all 8 are marked, connect the points — the resulting shape shows your current life balance at a glance. A perfectly round wheel is not the goal; an honest one is.

The 8 Life Dimensions

Dimension	What It Covers
Career / Work	Your sense of purpose, growth, and satisfaction in your professional life.
Finances	Your sense of security, control, and freedom around money.
Health & Fitness	Your physical wellbeing, energy levels, and health habits.
Family & Friends	The quality of your closest relationships and support network.
Romance / Partner	Your intimate relationship, or your openness to one.
Personal Growth	Learning, self-development, and progress toward who you want to become.
Fun & Recreation	Play, hobbies, and activities that aren't about productivity.
Physical Environment	Your home, workspace, and physical surroundings.

Scoring & Reflection Guide

The number on its own matters less than what the overall shape reveals. Use these prompts once all 8 dimensions are scored.

Looking at the shape you've drawn, where is it least round?

The dimensions with the biggest dips are usually the most informative — more than the ones already scoring high.

Which score surprised you most, in either direction?

A surprising score — higher or lower than you expected — often signals something worth examining more closely.

Which dimension, if it improved even slightly, would have the biggest positive effect on the others?

Dimensions are rarely independent — improving Health & Fitness, for example, often lifts Career and Family & Friends too.

Coaching Focus Identification

A completed wheel is a diagnostic, not a to-do list — these prompts help turn it into a focused starting point.

Which one or two dimensions do you want to focus on first?

Resist the urge to fix everything at once — one or two focused areas produce more real change than eight scattered efforts.

What would a score one point higher actually look like in this dimension?

Describe it concretely and specifically — not “better,” but what would visibly be different.

What is one small, specific action you could take in the next week toward that?

Small and immediate beats large and someday — momentum matters more than ambition here.

Who could support you, or hold you accountable, in this specific area?

A NOTE ON REVISITING THIS

Life circumstances shift, and so will your wheel. Redo this exercise every few months — not to chase a perfectly round shape, but to notice which dimensions are moving, and whether your current focus area is actually the one that most needs it.